Spot the Difference with Big Ben

What a classic photograph of London! We're not sure when it was taken, but one of the most reassuring things about our exciting capital, is that it always looks the same. The red buses, Big Ben, Houses of Parliament and Westminster Abbey are still standing, even in these challenging times.

Here, we're looking for a total of four differences between the two photos.

One or two things in this picture kind of indicate when it may have been taken.

Firstly, you have got the aeroplane in the left corner of the second photo, that isn't present in the first photo. So, we know that aeroplanes were in the sky at the time.

Secondly, the bus displays are not digital, which could indicate that this picture was taken pre-90s. Did you notice the different route numbers in each photo?

The lamppost on the right is missing its top in the second picture.

And last but not least, Big Ben's clock face is displaying a different time in each image. In the first picture, it is ten o'clock and in the second one, it is twenty past twelve.
